Hello Educators,

As we step into the vibrancy of April, we celebrate the resilience, creativity, and excellence within our community of Black educators. Amidst the challenges and triumphs, your dedication to empowering Black minds and transforming futures remains unwavering. In this edition, we honor our collective achievements and provide resources to support your ongoing journey.

This month, we shine a spotlight on Black educators who have made significant contributions to the field of education:

- Dr. Jawanza Kunjufu: Renowned educator and author advocating for the academic success of Black students through culturally responsive teaching and parental involvement.
- Geoffrey Canada: An educator and social activist, Geoffrey Canada is known for his work as the founder of the Harlem Children's Zone, an organization aimed at improving educational outcomes for children in Harlem, New York City. His holistic approach to education, focusing on community involvement and support, has garnered widespread recognition.
- Marva Collins: Trailblazing educator who founded the Westside Preparatory School in Chicago, providing quality education to Black children in underserved communities.

Expand your classroom library with culturally relevant literature that reflects the diverse experiences and identities of Black students.

Here are a few recommendations:

1. "The Hate U Give" by Angie Thomas: A powerful novel exploring themes of identity, activism, and resilience in the face of systemic injustice.
2. "Ghost Boys" by Jewell Parker Rhodes: A poignant story that examines the impact of racism and police violence on a young Black boy and his community.
